The Chanticleer of 1931 Volume 18

The annual publication of the student body of
Duke University
Durham, North Carolina

200611

Foreword

In presenting this, the eighteenth volume of the "Chanticleer," to you, the students, alumni, and faculty of Duke University, we, the staff, hope that it will in some small way help to preserve the memories and associations of those days which in all probability will be recalled as the most pleasant of your life.

If, then, in the years which are to come, this book will aid in bringing back fond remembrances, and in recalling the days which were so happily spent here, then our efforts shall not have been in vain and we shall have justified the faith.

Dedication

To the Indomitable Spirit of Modern College Youth, the Leadership of Tomorrow, this volume of the Chanticleer is dedicated.

The theme

Amid architectural settings which symbolize the enduring qualities of mediaeval and modern culture, the Duke University of today blends the finest elements of contemporary life with the intellectual and spiritual heritage of the ages. The treasures of the past, the stirring realities of the present, the challenging promise of the future unites in the spiritual entity which is Alma Mater.

The ideals of Duke are enshrined in her buildings and immortalized in her traditions. The Gothic spires of the West Campus and the Georgian pediments of the Woman's College stand as monuments which have woven immutable patterns in the fabric of human life. But those who live in surroundings which whisper of receding centuries are never deaf to the voice of the present. The spirit of the men and women who live and labor here moves in a modern tempo. For them the meeting point of Yesterday and Tomorrow is Today.

With the aim of expressing through word and symbol the Soul of the Present in the life of the University, this the 1931 "Chanticleer," with its modern motif, has been prepared.

UNIVERSITY

DORMITORY GROUPS—WEST CAMPUS

Duke University

The new Duke Campus, known as the West Campus, and occupied for the first time this year, represents the consummation of a noteworthy dream of architectural art. Authorities have declared it to be the last word in complete construction for academic purposes. The architecture is Tudor Gothic, carried out in thirty-one commodious buildings furnished with the most modern equipment. The stone of which these buildings is constructed, belonging to one of the oldest formations known to geologists, is in six or eight distinctly colored tints, which already lend to the campus an air of antiquity. It was brought from the University's own quarry about fifteen miles away.

The buildings are located in the midst of approximately five thousand acres of woodland campus, through which miles of scenic drives wind amid the sylvan solitude.

DORMITORY GROUP—EAST CAMPUS

The Co-ordinate College for Women

About a mile and a half from this new unit of Duke University is located the campus of the Coördinate College for Women, known as the East Campus, which was formerly the campus of Trinity College. This campus has been attractively developed in accordance with a complete plan of landscape architecture which makes it one of the South's most beautiful.

Since the creation of Duke University in 1924, the plant of the East Campus has been almost completely reconstructed in preparation for its use by the Woman's College. Practically all of the old buildings have been torn away and new ones erected, the architecture of these buildings being of the Georgian type.

Alma Mater

By R. H. JAMES, '24

Dear Old Duke. Thy name we sing,
To thee our voices raise—they raise—
To thee our anthems ring
In everlasting praise,
And though on Life's broad sea
Our fate may far us bear,
We'll ever turn to thee,
Our Alma Mater dear.

ACTIVITIES

JAMES DEHART
Director of Athletics 1930

James DeHart

No summary of Duke athletics would be complete without tribute to the man who made their successes possible, and who leaves us at the height of his glory. DeHart's football teams, severely criticized for their failures, were, even in their worst exhibitions an improvement over those of his predecessors, and last year, in his last season as football mentor, turned out a team that was easily the best in Duke history and one that made an enviable record in the State and against Northern rivals, and won the mythical South Atlantic Championship.

When DeHart came to Duke, the activities were on a par with those of any small college, but not extensive enough or of the calibre to fit a large university. He immediately set out to remedy this, and the athletic schedules of all teams since his coming have shown the results of his ambition of putting athletics on a high standard. Since he has been in charge of the athletic destinies of the Blue Devils, teams representing Duke have won titles in baseball, basketball, football, wrestling, both state and sectional, and individuals have won championships in Southern Conference boxing, track, cross-country, tennis, and golf. He has widened the scope and sphere of Duke athletics to the point where it has received nation-wide recognition.

The beautiful concrete stadium will remain a memory to Jimmy DeHart, erected as it was by his foresight, development, and ambition, and ever-sincere interest for Duke athletics.

WALLACE WADE
Director of Athletics 1931

Wallace Wade

The signing of the nationally famous coach of the Alabama Crimson Tide, three times selected to play in the Rose Bowl, and developer of many All-Americans, means a big step forward for Duke athletics in general and football in particular. Wade is recognized as a football coach second perhaps to only Knute Rockne. There is every reason to expect that Wade will continue his past success at Duke, in which case, Duke football teams can be expected to develop into contenders for national honors.

Wallace Wade in coming to Duke with his enviable record and reputation, steps into a most difficult spot. Much is expected of him and few realize that it will take time for him to develop his system and style of play. A few losses sustained during the period of development should not be taken too seriously, or draw forth too much criticism on him. That should be more or less expected, but after the tremendous success of the 1930 eleven, under Coach DeHart, Coach Wade has a hard assignment in going on where his predecessor left off.

Coach Wade has the best wishes of all, and it is hoped, the coöperation of all. We feel sure that his success with the Blue Devils will equal that noteworthy record he made with the Crimson Tide.

Coaching Staff, 1930-1931

All athletics during 1930-1931 were under the direction of Jimmie DeHart, head coach at Duke. Coach DeHart assumes charge of football and also performs the duties of Director of Athletics for the University. Coach DeHart is a former Pittsburg star, having played half there for four years, with time out during the World War.

George Buchheit, cross-country and track coach, also acts as Assistant Director of Athletics. Coach Bucky is University of Illinois man, and was a track and basketball star while there. Tex Tilson, former Washington and Lee star, is assistant coach of football and also head mentor of wrestling and boxing, which is a full-time job for any man! Eddie Cameron, Duke's wonder basketball coach, is also a former Washington and Lee man. Eddie has turned out runners-up in the Southern Conference basketball tournament for the past two years. Jack Lenox Baker, former trainer at Tennessee, came to Duke in 1929 to act as trainer while pursuing studies in medicine at U. N. C. Emerson Sammers, another Washington and Lee athlete, was assistant coach of freshman football and coach of freshman wrestling and boxing this year.

Jack Persons took charge of the swimmers for the first time this year. He is a Duke graduate. Freshman football was under the coaching of two former Alabama stars, and assistants under Coach Wade. Ellis Hagler acted as line coach while Herschel Caldwell took charge of the backfield. Both will act as assistants to Coach Wallace Wade next year.

Football Review

The season of 1930 marked the beginning of a new epoch in football at Duke University. As everyone knows, the team completed one of the most successful seasons in history, losing only one game out of a difficult eleven game schedule. This achievement, in addition to bringing greater renown to the already famous name of Duke, was in the nature of a realization of the aims and ideals of Coach DeHart.

In their second year of actual gridiron competition in the Southern Conference, the Blue Devils completed the season with an .800 per centage, representing four victories out of five conflicts. This gave them a standing of fourth in the group; but the fact that brought even greater satisfaction than this was the gain of the State Championship for the initial time. Their record in North Carolina contests was unmarred by defeat, although two draws were fought with Wake Forest and Carolina.

In the line of individual attainment, the name of Bill Murray undoubtedly heads the list. His record for the year represents the story of a glorious comeback. His all-round play was consistently brilliant, and the mere fact that he gained over a thousand yards from scrimmage during the season speaks sufficiently well for his ability.

Only four other members of the varsity eleven completed their careers during 1930. Captain "Red" Davis overcame the handicap of an early-season illness and proved to be an able player and inspiring leader. His performance in the line left nothing to be desired; and he was well seconded in this respect by the other three seniors, "Buzz" Rosky, Charlie Rupp, and Bob Bayes. Rosky especially, in the unique capacity of signal-calling end, proved to be of infinite value to the team at all times.

It is unfortunate that an individual resume of the games must be begun with the lone defeat sustained by the Devils during the entire season; and it would probably be best to say very little concerning this game. Played against South Carolina during the first week of school, it was a perfect example of a tragedy occurring from a concentration of the well-known breaks of the game. The visitors, showing better early season training and more thorough preparation for this opening battle, took advantage of three intercepted passes to register three touchdowns, and triumphed by the apparently one-sided score of 22 to 0. The Duke team showed a much better attack, but it was too spasmodic to result in any tallies. However, it must be admitted that the record compiled by the Duke men following this heart-breaking setback was all the more creditable in the light of this first fray.

The squad really swung into its stride for the first time the following week against a highly-touted bunch of Cavaliers from the University of Virginia. There was never a momentary doubt concerning the better eleven, and the home team scored almost as they pleased to record a 32 to 0 win, representing their first Conference victory of the infant campaign.

They kept up this policy of reform in the next engagement with Davidson, and won by the comfortable margin of 12 to 0. The Wildcats presented a sturdy defense that did not crumble until the fourth period; however, Duke was handicapped by a limited number of plays, and although the offense displayed signs of great power it was evident that the coach was bringing the squad along slowly, doubtlessly realizing that the big games lay just ahead. Brewer was the individual star of this combat, gaining over a hundred yards from scrimmage. Despite the closeness of the battle for most of its duration, there was never any serious doubt concerning the better team; immediately after the opening whistle the Devils took the oval on their own 10-yard stripe and marched 87 yards, only to see a sure score slip away when an off-side penalty broke up the attack more effectively than the opposition could. This game was full of sudden thrills and individual features, and on the whole was extremely well played.

Nevertheless, it was not until the following Saturday that the Blue Devils fittingly demonstrated their capabilities. They journeyed to Annapolis as the proverbial underdog, despite their surprising victory of the week before; but they put on an act that caught the sailors flatfooted and resulted in a great 18 to 0 triumph. The Middies never had a real opportunity to score; it was an even battle up to the final play of the first half, when Mason, sub quarter, threw a twenty-yard pass over the scrimmage line to Murray, who caught the ball between two of the enemy secondary but outran them both for the first touchdown while a large Duke delegation went absolutely crazy. This play represented merely an inkling of what was to come in the third and fourth quarters; an inspired Duke eleven, mindful that this Navy nemesis had in both their games of preceding years come out after the intermission to win in the second half, batted the home forces to a standstill and succeeded in pushing over two more scores before the end of the game. From a Duke standpoint, the game itself was a beautiful exhibition of what a gridiron team can do when every man does his job consistently and well. It represented what was undoubtedly the most outstanding Devil intersectional victory, and tokened well of even greater events to come.

The squad journeyed in the opposite direction for their next combat, travelling south to encounter Wofford on the latter's field. This game marked a slight letdown, which was only to be expected after the great heights to which the men had risen the week previous. However, sufficient power was displayed to earn two six-pointers and a 14 to 0 conquest.

On the first week-end of November, the team played on alien territory for the third consecutive time. They went to Philadelphia to encounter the Villanova Wildcats in the spacious Seaqui Stadium; this game was extremely hard-fought and filled with thrills from start to finish. Once again Murray, ably seconded by Rosky, were the shining lights in an irresistible Duke attack that swept down the field for two touchdowns in the first half. "Smiling Bill" as the northern papers were wont to call him, did about everything one man can legally get away with on a gridiron.

He carried the ball from scrimmage about half the time, threw the passes, and did the kicking and running back of punts; he scored one touchdown and was chiefly instrumental in the making of the other.

Following this notable intersectional triumph came the Devils' outstanding conference victory. This game, played against Kentucky on November 8, was the best battle waged on the home turf of the stadium during the entire campaign. Once again the Duke eleven displayed perfect teamwork and fine coaching; they thoroughly outplayed the visitors, who were pre-game favorites. They tallied twice as the result of sustained marches practically the entire length of the field; and Kentucky scored only as the result of a last gasp forward heaved in the final quarter. Hyatt and Adkins were of invaluable assistance in this game; the former teamed with Rosky in smearing all attempts by the visitors' fast backfield to circle the ends, while Adkins was a proverbial tower of strength in the center of the line. This fray was similar to the one of the week before in many respects; Duke scored a brace of touchdowns and then defended this lead against their opponents' belated passing attack, which finally showed only seven completed passes out of 23 attempts.

The following week a downpour of rain spoiled the annual fracas with State, played this year at Raleigh. The attack of both teams hogged down in the mud, but the Devils displayed enough power to overcome both the Wolfpack and the weatherman; they scored three times to register their seventh consecutive victory. The battle was rather void of flashy plays, and was notable rather for a large number of fumbles. This was the first game the Devils had played this year on anything but a fairly dry field, but they demonstrated from the start that the inclement weather made little difference, although the latter was to be of momentous consequence in the classic combat with Carolina a few weeks hence.

At this period in their schedule the Blue and White gridders were going like a house afire; but they met a sudden check in the form of a stonewall line from Wake Forest, as the final score of 13-13 indicates. In this game the Devils scored in the first two minutes of play by virtue of a thirty-yard pass from Mason to Hyatt, who made a great catch of the pumpkin and toted it the remaining 28 yards to the scoring stripe. After this play all the spectators thought that the visiting aggregation would have things much their own way; but the demon Deacons showed remarkable recuperative powers and staged a great comeback to earn a tie decision. In fact, the final statistics indicated the fray to be a toss-up that the score proved it to be; and this game marked the first time that the Devils had been outgained from scrimmage all year.

The Duke team played its second hard game in five days when they took on the Generals from Washington and Lee as the Thanksgiving Day feature. Once again two touchdowns was the final margin; Murray scored them both, the second time as the result of a 55-yard dash following the interception of a forward pass. Frigid weather resulted in a superabundance of fumbles; this was the principal factor in keeping the score as low as it was, for the first downs total showed an advantage of nineteen to four in favor of the Blue and White. This game was the final exhibition for the season on the home field, and was more or less in the nature of a final polishing-up for the momentous battle with the Tar Heels on the following Saturday.

This game, the last of the season, was a disappointment to everyone concerned in that it resulted in a scoreless deadlock. Waged on a rain-soaked gridiron in a teaming downpour that spoiled all opportunities for a scoring drive by either team, this engagement nevertheless represented the best exhibition that Duke has ever made in a Carolina game. Even though there was no score, final statistics clearly indicate the edge that Duke had over their foes, especially in the second half, when Carolina failed to register a single first down and lost in all sixteen yards more than they gained from scrimmage. In fact, during the entire game the Tar Heels, supposedly an offensive aggregation, gained just 23 yards more than they lost. The Devil's net earnings in the running department was nearly five times better than this record, or, to be exact, 108 yards; their final edge in first downs was nine to five. However, there is one consolation, at least; the State championship, which has rested in Chapel Hill so often during the past few years, has come to reside by virtue of this final engagement at Duke University for the first time since the gridiron game was reinstituted here in 1922.

At the annual banquet, held shortly after the close of the season, varsity letters were awarded to a total of twenty-five players, including the following: Captain Davis, Captain-elect Brewer, Murray, Rosky, Hayes, Rupp, Taylor, Adkins, Hughes, Hyatt, Carpenter, Bryan, Mason, Werner, Abbott, Brownlee, Harton, Daugherty, Thorne, Lemons, Short, Mullen, Ershler, Hamrick, Sink, and Jones, manager.

As noted above, "Kid" Brewer, fullback, was elected to lead the 1931 team: Duke is thus assured of having a worthy successor to Davis in this important capacity. Brewer played well all year and waged a close race with Murray for individual scoring honors in the state.

And in closing, to quote an editorial from the Chronicle: "No word of praise to Duke's 1930 eleven would be complete without some reference to Coach Jimmy DeHart. Completing his last year at the university, the little mentor played a part in his team's victories that could be overlooked by no one, and which won him a place in the hearts of the school far more lasting than the fickle plaudits of the football fan. He left a record that can be handed over with pride to his successor.

"We take this opportunity of expressing to the 1930 football team the congratulations of the university. Some day some of us are going to get a lot of pleasure out of saying, 'Yep, I graduated back in '31, the year we broke the Tar Heel jinx, won the state championship, and got things started right for you young fellows.'"

The loss of several stars, including Werber and Councilor, All-Southern selections, was somewhat offset by the return of the undefeated freshman team, which enabled the basketball team to go through a hard schedule in a successful fashion so as to annex the State Championship title for the third time in four years. The only remnants of the previous year's team which, by the way, went to the finals in the Southern Conference Tournament were the co-captains, Croson and Rogers, and Shaw and Carter, substitutes. With these four as a nucleus, a strong team was assembled, which included the sophomores, Colley, Cappelli, Robertshaw, Hill, and Horne.

In the first game against Villanova, the Blue Devils gave indications of future strength and successes by losing by only one point in the final minutes of play.

The first win of the season was chalked up in the second game against Randolph-Macon, which resulted in an easy win for the Devils. This winning brand of play was continued against Wofford, the next opponent.

On a Northern trip, two out of three games were lost. Duke lost to Maryland one of the strongest in the Conference, by a close score, and to Temple also, but defeated the Navy to compensate for these losses. Just prior to this trip, South Carolina and Wake Forest were met and easily defeated, the smoothness of the Duke attack featuring these games.

N. C. State beat the Devils in a fast game, but this defeat was quickly followed up by wins over Carolina, Davidson, and Wake Forest in succession. The fast attack of the Duke team was reminiscent of teams of previous years, but the shooting was not up to that standard and N. C. State again managed to defeat the Blue Devils by amassing an early lead, which the Devils found too much to entirely overcome.

HORNE

On a later short invasion into enemy territory, Duke broke even, winning from Vanderbilt and losing to Tennessee.

Returning from this trip, our rivals from Chapel Hill were again defeated, this win being followed by one over Davidson, which brought the State Championship to Durham for another year.

In the final game of the year against Sewanee, the Duke teamsters rose to their greatest heights and swamped the invaders by an unstoppable attack, led by Pete Carter, the high scorer in a high scoring game.

In the annual Southern Conference Tournament at Atlanta, Duke started off as though the successes of the preceding two years were to be continued; but, after beating Clemson, the advance of the Blue Devils met with a snag in the form of the strong Kentucky team, and, after a hard-fought game, the Devils were on the short end of a close score.

ADAMS

It would be impossible to pick any one outstanding player from among the Blue Devils. Joe Croson, although rather erratic in his play, was brilliant enough when on his game to be chosen second All-Southern center for the second successive year. Rogers, with his sharp basket-shooting eye, played a game of high class, and both he and Joe Croson will be missed next year. The flashy Cappelli gives promise of development into an All-Southern forward, and the defensive play of Colley and Cochrane was a feature of Duke's games. John Shaw, in addition to being a backbone of the Duke defense, was second to Croson in scoring honors.

Outstanding in court play all through the basketball season, especially during the latter part, was Don Robertshaw, regular varsity guard. These five men, all of whom will be back next year, along with Hill, a fine center, Horne, forward, and Carter, give promise of a powerful aggregation on the court next winter.

Baseball, 1930

Perhaps the greatest compliment that could have been handed to the stellar Duke baseball team and the coaching of Jack Coombs was the great interest of the major league scouts in the individual members of this great aggregation, which for three years had been one of the outstanding teams in the South. There was hardly a game played that not less than two of these scouts and sometimes as many as six were on hand to critically observe the Blue Devils in action and to get a line on the future Babe Ruths and Ty Cobbs. Their opinion of the Devils was so high that not less than seven were offered major league contracts, probably the highest number from a single college that ever received big league offers in one season. These men who were thought to have major league baseball ability were Captain Nick Warren, Bill Werber, Boley Farley, Dayton Dean, Henry Kistler, Lefty Jenkins, and Jean Belue. The offers came from the Athletics, Yankees, St. Louis Cardinals, Washington Senators, Cincinnati Reds, and the Pittsburgh Pirates, while two big minor league teams, the Baltimore and Charlotte clubs sought proteges of the former Athletic star, Jack Coombs.

Although an exceptional team, the Blue Devils did not repeat their remarkable success of the previous season when they won the Southern Conference Championship, but did finish second to Alabama, no mean accomplishment. Only three games were lost to Southern schools, one each to Georgia, N. C. State, and Davidson, but these teams were each beaten once in the second games of the two game series.

once each. Other Southern teams beaten by Duke in the course of their campaign were Virginia twice, Washington and Lee, Maryland, Georgia, and Navy once.

On the annual Northern trip, some of the leading Eastern teams were met and beaten by the Blue Devils. Those tasting defeat at the hands of Duke diamond stars were Princeton, Pennsylvania, Villanova, while N. Y. U. won a close game. Cornell was also met during Easter vacation in a series at Haues Field, and their scalps were also added to the Duke belt.

For the second time in two years, the mythical All-Southern team included the names of Bill Werber, shortstop, Lefty Jenkins, pitcher, and Henry Kistler, first baseman. Werber by his sensational fielding and consistently heavy batting easily won his place, while Jenkins and Kistler were almost equally outstanding in their respective positions.

After finishing the college season, Werber went to the New York Yankees, with whom he played in several games and made a great hit with the New York fans.

He was later farmed out to the Albany club where he finished the year as the leading shortstop in that circuit, and was adjudged the most valuable player in the Eastern league. Jenkins also was farmed out to the Eastern league, where he made a fine record as pitcher. Boley Farley, farmed to St. Joseph in the Western league by St. Louis, started in where he left off at Duke and continued his same high grade of baseball.

Other members of this team who finished their college careers were Red Murray and Lee Hawkins. Those who returned this year, and will form a nucleus for a new, it is hoped, championship team, are Tom Bennett, Captain-elect, Harrington, and Rochelle, outfielders; Hoyt Shore, infield; Howell, catcher; and Duffey, McKeithan, Metz, Warwick, pitchers. Add to these the returning members of the freshman team, Coach Coombs' genius, and it is hoped that Duke's past baseball successes will be continued.

Track and Field, 1930

The 1930 track team, headed by Captain Roberts in the high jump, and with the veterans, Simon, Heizer, and Flinton in the distance events, Webster in the weights, McLarty in the javelin, and Freeman, all-around star, was aided by the addition of Hicks and Cook in the dashes, Sharpe and Turner in the pole vault, Brewer and Winslow in the weights, Keegan in the javelin, and Zachary in the broad jump. Considering the small size of the squad, and the comparative inexperience of most of the team, the season was fairly successful.

In the first meet of the season, the strong Washington and Lee team was met, and proved to be too much for the Duke aggregation, who went down to defeat although fighting valiantly for their places. The versatile Freeman, and Bill Simon, who has few superiors in distance runs in the South, accounted for most of the Duke points.

The Blue Devils scored one in the winning column in the next meet with Wake Forest, beating the Baptists by a large score. The whole team was in good form and showed improvement over the last meet.

The inconsistency of the Blue Devils made itself manifest in the next meet with V. P. I. Again the Devils met with defeat, but only because they were up against a better all-round squad. The Duke stars, Freeman, Simon, Cook, Hicks, and Heizer, again gave a good account of themselves.

About due for another win, the Duke track men came back against N. C. State, easily defeating the boys from Raleigh. The Blue Devils were impressive in the running, while State carried off most of the honors in the field events.

In meeting North Carolina, the Duke men were up against one of the best teams in the South and, considering the record of the Tar Heels, made a very creditable showing. Although Carolina won, each event was keenly contested.

The season was ended with State meet at Greensboro. The Carolina team won easily and Duke was nosed out for second place by Davidson. Simon won the two mile run to set a new state record for that event.

Members of the team awarded letters were: Simon, Freeman, Heizer, Roberts, Cook, Hicks, Webster, Flinton, and Sharpe. The point winners who missed the letter distinctions were: Zachary, Winslow, Turner, Smith, Keegan, Green, Massengill, and Brewer.

Bill Simon and Ches Freeman, stars for two seasons, were elected co-captains for the 1931 team and will lead, in 1931, a strong team of veterans and exceptionally promising sophomores.

Cross-Country, 1930

The Blue Devil harriers, led by Jim Heizer, struggled through an unsuccessful season. Although Heizer turned in several good performances, and was ably aided by Flinton, Lewis, Martin, Lawrence, and Grimes, the services of Bill Simon, one of the best distance runners in the South, was greatly missed.

The schedule was short and all the teams met were strong outfits. Navy, the first to be met, beat the Duke distance men in a meet at Annapolis. Captain Heizer showed up well as did Shack Martin, boxing captain, and Lewis and Flinton.

Washington and Lee, met next, registered a close, hard fought win over Duke by the heart-breaking score of 28-27. Heizer, Martin, Lewis, and Flinton finished up well.

The short dual season was ended with the Carolina meet which was won by the strong Tar Heel team after a hard fight, and the season was formally brought to a close by the annual Southern Conference run. Flinton finished best for Duke, followed by Heizer, Lewis, Martin, and Gordon.

WRESTLING SQUAD, 1931

Wrestling, 1930-31

In the first wrestling meet of the Blue Devil season Captain Lee Cole led a husky team against Franklin and Marshall at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, but lost 18-16. Gamble, Wall, Mullen, and Hughes all won in grappling contests there. The F. and M. team is one of the strongest in the East, having been undefeated during the whole season. The Duke team was weakened somewhat because two regulars could not make the trip.

Upon returning home Duke met V. P. I. again losing a heart-breaking match by two points, score being 16-14. Four Duke men, Gamble, Cole, Mullen, and Atkins won. The feature match was between Captain Cole and Captain Bailey, with the former gaining a narrow time advantage.

On February 11, the Duke matmen met North Carolina State, and turned in their first win of the year, the score being 20-6. John Gamble, classy little 118-pounder, lost only one match during the season and Captain Eason of State administered this defeat. Williams, Wall, and Adkins won narrow decisions, while Hughes won handily from State's big Indian, Sam Gurneau. Captain Cole had an easy time with the visting middleweight, exhibiting various scissor holds and displaying a rare knowledge of the mat game. Plaster won the only fall of the meet.

During the following two weeks Coach Tilson's grunt-and-growl men met four teams. This schedule seems to have been too hard for them, as they won only one of the four meets. They went to Davidson on February 14, and returned with a 24-6 victory. Gamble, Adkins, and Thomas all won by falls, while Mullen and Captain Cole won time advantages, the latter wrestling Thad Brock, Davidson's football captain. The feature match was between Wall and Tyack, Wall emerging the victor. Williams and Hughes lost time decisions, Hughes losing to Captain Conway of Davidson.

The last three meets were with V. M. I., Washington and Lee, and Carolina, undoubtedly the three strongest wrestling teams in the South this year. In the V. M. I. meet Duke won only two matches. Johnny Gamble won a fall while Captain Cole won a decision. In the W. and L. match, Gamble again scored three points by winning a decision, while Adkins scored a fall in the heavyweight class. The season ended with the Carolina match, in which Gamble starred by winning from Usher, Carolina's 118-pounder.

Letters were awarded at the end of the season to John Gamble, Pope Williams, Lindsay Wall, Tommy Thomas, Captain Lee Cole, Moon Mullens, Pinky Plaster, Emory Adkins, and Lewis Hughes.

BOXING SQUAD, 1931

Boxing, 1931

Captain Shack Martin led a team of veteran boxers through a successful season, winning five and losing three matches. Besides Martin, the returning veterans included Starnes, former wrestling captain and Southern Champion, Wentz, Bolich, Hyatt, and Rankin. Newcomers in the lineup were Riddick and Fuller, both of whom had had some experience last year, and Kid Brewer.

In the debut against N. C. State, all the matches were easily won by Duke except the heavyweight match, which was lost by Hyatt to Red Espey after four rounds of hard fighting. It was a close fight and might have gone either way.

South Carolina provided the next opposition, again in the Duke gym, and Duke won all except the 135-pound fight, which was forfeited due to Starnes' sickness. All the fights, excepting Kid Brewer's knockout over Heany were determined by decisions.

A return match with N. C. State in Raleigh was again won by Duke, this time by the closer score of 4-3. Fuller showed to good advantage in his first fight and won by a K. O. Hyatt lost another close decision to Espey, and Ershler, in Bolich's place lost, as did Kid Brewer in the heavyweight class.

The next fights carried the Blue Devils a long way from their own campus, down to Baton Rouge, La., where L. S. U. was met and given a close fight by a 4-3 score. On the next night the strong Tulane team beat Duke, 5-2; Bolich and Martin, however, won by K. O. route and the rest of the team put up fine battles before decisions were called.

"RED" STARNES, "KID" BREWER, DON HYATT, CAPTAIN "SHACK" MARTIN, "PHIL" BOLICH

Bolich and Martin won at L. S. U. and had a clean slate on the trip. Wentz also won at L. S. U.

Virginia, one of the strongest teams in the Conference, was met and defeated, 4-3. The feature of this match was the fight between Rankin of Duke and Gentry of Virginia, the Conference lighthweight champion. Rankin delivered a terrific wallop and knocked out the champion in the first round. Another remarkable feature of this match was that after losing the first three bouts, the 115-pound fight by forfeit, the Duke pugs went on to win the last four and the match.

The Carolina match drew a large crowd to the Duke gym. Opening the last fight, with the score tied at 3-3, Warren, Carolina heavyweight, won a narrow decision from Rankin after a close fight. Riddick and Bolich won their fights by knockouts, and Wentz accounted for the other.

The season was ended, except for the tournament, by the defeating of Washington and Lee, 5-2, the only matches lost being that of Riddick, who suffered a K. O., and a forfeit of the 145-pound fight. Hyatt and Rankin scored knockouts in the first rounds, Hyatt gaining the honor of administering the quickest K. O. in the Duke gym, coming after only 22 seconds of the opening round.

In the tournament the whole team performed creditably. Martin reached the finals for the third successive time; Bolich the semi-finals; and all others reached the quarter-finals.

Phil Bolich, undefeated in dual meets for two years, was elected captain to succeed "Shack" Martin.

SWIMMING SQUAD, 1931

Swimming, 1930-31

Composed mostly of a green and inexperienced team, the considerably shortened schedule was too brief to enable the new coach, Jack Persons, to develop a winning tank team, although the veterans, headed by Captain Smathers and including Rutenberg, Smith, and Deichman showed great improvement over last year's form.

The first match in the beautiful new pool was won by W. and L. This team displayed proof of being one of the strongest teams in the South. Points were won by Smathers, Rutenberg, Smith, and Deichman in the strokes, and by McLean, a sophomore, in the diving. In the only other meet, at the University of Virginia, the Devil natators again met a strong team and were defeated once more, the Virginia squad proving to be too strong and well balanced an aggregation. Bill Farthing, however, who had not taken an active part in tank activities during the first part of the season, took first in diving at Charlottesville.

The high scorers on the Duke team were Rutenberg and Smith. The rest of the team with this year's experience and with a strong freshman team coming back next year should develop into one of the best in the South under Coach Persons' able direction.

It is hoped that another sport will be added to the Duke athletic curriculum next year. Water polo was introduced this year by Coach Persons and it met with instant approval and popularity. Several exhibition contests were played between teams composed of varsity swimmers and freshmen, who showed great aptitude for the new game and possibilities for successful future teams.

1931 GOLF SQUAD

TAGGART, HAY, CALDWELL, CAPTAIN RANDLE, ZINNAMON, OULD, BRADSHAW, CRITCHLEY, BERRY

Golf, 1930

Handicapped by inexperienced men, the Devil golfers underwent a rather unsuccessful season showing three wins in eight starts in the dual meets and finishing second in the State Tournament held at Sedgefield, N. C. The golfers opened the season with William and Mary and after throwing an early lead lost by the slight margin of $9\frac{1}{2}$ to $8\frac{1}{2}$. The next meets proved rather disastrous as the Devil-men fell before the strong Carolina quartet $14\frac{1}{2}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$ and continued their losing streak by falling before Virginia 14-4, and William and Mary $10\frac{1}{2}$ to $7\frac{1}{2}$. Showing a complete reversal of form, the Devil golfers overcome Carolina $9\frac{1}{2}$ to $8\frac{1}{2}$, and Davidson 15-3, to finish second in the State Tournament. Continuing their winning streak, N. C. State was taken into tow 15-3 only to avenge themselves several days later by edging out a $9\frac{1}{2}$ to $8\frac{1}{2}$ win to close the 1930 season.

TENNIS SQUAD, 1931

Tennis, 1930

With the return of the veterans, Captain Jack Meyers, George Rogers, Grady Frank, Carter Farriss, and the former frosh stars, Gene Phillips and Zeb Curtis, the Duke tennis team was provided with a wealth of able material that compared favorably with any in the South, and finished the season with the best record ever attained at Duke. Ten matches were won, and only Alabama, Virginia, and Carolina succeeded in vanquishing the Devil racquet-weilders, even then by only the narrowest of margins.

In the State tournament held at Chapel Hill, two Duke men reached the semi-finals, Phillips and Frank, and two teams reached the doubles semi-finals, Rogers-Frank, who went to the finals, and Meyers-Phillips.

The usual Northern trip of the netmen was a conspicuous success. The first match, with the University of Richmond, was a clean sweep, Duke winning by 9-0 score. This unbeatable brand of tennis was continued in the next meet with the University of Maryland, and second score of 9-0 was turned in to the Blue Devils' credit. Georgetown, with one of the strongest teams in the East was met next and also fell before the powerful Duke team, 7-2. This result greatly surprised those who did not know the true strength of Blue Devils, and brought forth much favorable comment. From Washington the team journeyed to Charlottesville, and the strain of travel began to show itself when the Blue Devils lost their first and only match of the trip to the University of Virginia by the close score of 5-4. The final match was with Washington and Lee which the Devil team won 5-4, and thus ended one of the most successful trips ever taken by a Duke team.

The Duke schedule of home matches was: Carolina, whose team showed results of expert coaching and defeated Duke in two matches by 7-2 scores; Alabama, who caught the Blue Devil team early in the season before they had hit their stride, and nased out a 4-3 victory; and, Hampden-Sidney, which was beaten by a score of 9-0, despite the presence in the line of the Virginia State Champion who was defeated by Captain Meyers.

The brand of tennis of the whole team was of high calibre, in particular that of Gene Phillips, who at times rose to great heights; and George Rogers, who lost but one of 13 matches; Grady Frank, who finished his tennis career at Duke, having been awarded the Rhodes Scholarship to Oxford; and Captain Meyers, who showed brilliantly at times. This great record should be continued next year, when, unless some unforeseen mishaps occur, Duke will be represented by another strong team, headed by Gene Phillips, George Rogers, Zeb Curtis, and Jack Meyers.

CAPTAINS, MINOR SPORTS VARSITY TEAMS

MARTIN, Boxing	COLE, Wrestling
HEIZER, Cross-Country	RANDLE, Golf
MYERS, Tennis	SMATHERS, Swimming

Minor Sports

The rapid development of the major sports teams at Duke during the past year has been closely followed by the fine records of the minor sports. For the past few years, the minor sports have had teams ranking at or near the top in the South and state.

The season of 1930-31 saw the past records of the Boxing, Wrestling, Cross-Country, Swimming, Tennis, and Golf teams carried on by the same high class performance that have won championships for Duke in the past.

The boxing team led by Shack Martin ranked high and had a successful season. Captain Martin for the third successive year went to the finals in the Southern Conference Tournament.

Although not up to the high standard set in previous years, the wrestling team went through a difficult schedule in fine style. "Chin" Cole, a member of the Southern Championship team of three years ago, led the grapplers.

The cross-country team, minus services of several former record-breakers, was ably captained by Jimmy Heizer, but could not reach the high performance set by preceding Devil harriers, who brought to Duke Southern and State Championships.

FRESHMAN GIRLS' SWIMMING TEAM

WHEELER, ROSE, JANSEN, SEIGER, HILBERT, VOIGT, WATKINS, COACH MOISE

Several individual championships have come to Duke from past swimming teams, and this year's team, with several stars on it, would probably have continued the fine record had they been represented in the Conference Tournament.

The tennis team ranked with the leading teams in the South and East last year, and led by Jack Meyers made an enviable record in dual meets and the State Tournament.

The development of the golf team has gone forward with rapid strides. To begin the 1931 season only one veteran, Captain Wilson Randle, returned, but a wealth of sophomore material gave promise of a successful season.

Upsetting the dope in an early meet, the Devil linksmen played Carolina to a 9-9 tie. The Carolina boys had been slated for a southern conference championship and the deadlock with them ranked the Duke team as an outstanding contender.

The first three places on the team were filled by Captain Randle, June Caldwell and William Hay. The fourth berth was alternated between Buck Berry, Vic Baucom and John Zimmerman.

A wealth of freshman material make prospects for a championship team in 1932 far more brilliant than ever before.

Front row: RUMFELDT, BELUE, TATE, TYSON, HENDRICKSON, ROSSITER, MARCOUX, ROGERS

Freshman Football, 1930

The Blue Imps, under the new Wade system as expounded by Coaches Hagler and Caldwell, finished the most successful season on the gridiron in the history of Duke freshman teams.

The Duke team opened the season against State and four powerful Imp teams showed what was to be expected of Wade as the State team fell before their powerful Imp onslaughts.

Playing against their old rivals from Oak Ridge the Blue Imps won another decided victory.

The Duke frosh journeyed to Wake Forest and after being held scoreless the first half by the Baby Deacons the freshmen piled up 26 points due to several punts being blocked by Huggins and James. Wake Forest put up a game fight but could not break into the impregnable Duke defense.

The best game of the season was with the Tar Babies of Carolina. It was a nip and tuck battle from the initial kick-off to the final whistle. The Blue Imps missed many chances to score within the five yard line, but the outcome was never in doubt. The final score was 14-7 in favor of Duke.

The freshmen journeyed down to Davidson for the final game of the season. The game turned out to be a track meet. The score was 52 to 0.

The Blue Imps won the State Championship and several men were picked on the mythical All-State freshman team. Several of the freshmen from this year's team are expected to hold down varsity berths next season.

Freshman Basketball, 1930-31

Under the expert tutelage of Coach Bill Murray, a wealth of talented basketball material was whipped into a strong team, which lost only two games, both by a one point margin, and annexed the State Championship.

In the first game, the Randolph-Macon frosh team was easily beaten. The Duke team showed a lot of potential power, but many rough edges needed to be smoothed.

Wake Forest, the next opponent was beaten by the Blue Imps, who showed a smoother attack and much material.

A heart-breaking game was lost to N. C. State by the narrow margin of one point, final score being 29-28. This was a hard-fought game and never lacked action.

The Oak Ridge Cadets were completely outclassed by the Duke frosh, and were beaten by an overwhelming score. This game saw the entire Duke team in top form and gave promise of future varsity stars. This brand of stellar play was continued against the Carolina Tar Babies who met the same fate as Oak Ridge.

Revenge for the one point defeat by State was obtained in the next meeting of these teams, and Duke defeated the Red Terror frosh.

Another hard fought game was dropped, this time to Carolina by a one point margin. The Imps were slow in getting started and the end of the game saw them on the short end of a 19-18 score. A most successful season was ended by a victory over Wake Forest.

A great deal of promising material was evidenced in the freshman aggregation, which should aid in the future varsity team of the next year. Alpert, the two Thompson brothers, Weaver, Conroy, James, Hendrickson, Burnham, Hardee, and Flohr should prove valuable on the next years varsity.

While this team did not set the world on fire, Coach Coombs should be able to pick from it quite a few men to fill the vacancies left on his varsity club by graduation.

Intersociety Debate

The thirty-eighth annual debate between the Columbian and Hesperian Literary Societies, the two venerable forensic organizations on the university campus, was won on the evening of December sixteenth by the representatives of Columbia. For the last three years, Columbia has consistently narrowed the margin of victories between the two groups, and now boasts a record of eighteen decisions to Hesperia's twenty.

The subject of the 1930-31 clash was "Resolved, that the nations of the world should adopt a policy of free trade." C. Pardue Bunch, Arthur Koffler, and Raymond L. Council, the Columbian team, upheld the affirmative side of the query. William P. Farthing, Lawson B. Knott, and George L. Robbins, speaking for Hesperia, supported the negative. Strong arguments were advanced both for and against the issue, and the debaters ably maintained the high standard which precedent has set for this historic event.

Judges for the occasion were Dr. W. K. Green, Rev. H. E. Myers, Prof. A. C. Jordan, Mr. C. E. Jordan, and Mr. E. T. Parkes. Assistant Dean H. J. Herring presided. Despite the commendable efforts of the Hesperian speakers, the unanimous verdict of the five judges went to the Columbian team. This year the debate was moved with the men's college to the west campus of the university, and was carried on in one of the halls of the new school of Religion building. An interested audience heard the verbal battle which represents what is probably the most ancient contest within the university walls.

Although there have been no sensational conquests by the Musical Clubs of late, the past year has been one of most successful achievements in this and surrounding territories, and has added greatly to the organization's already long list of contributions to the pleasure of the university community in general. The beginning of their activity, soon after school opened, saw the largest number of aspirants for positions in the Glee Club and Symphony Orchestra ever heretofore witnessed. The fall tour, taken in December, carried the group into some of the state's largest cities, and the program presented brought down enthusiastic comments from representatives of the press. A concert in Page Auditorium, supplemented by the appearance of the Quartet and the University Club Orchestra at many social functions of note, and the participation of the Symphony Orchestra and the Glee Clubs in the excellent Faculty Recital, filled the calendar of the ensuing winter months. Venturing into Eastern Virginia on their spring tour, the musicians were loudly acclaimed by the critics, and were invited to appear in that section again next year. A famous Dubois cantata was presented by the combined Men's and Women's Glee Clubs before a large audience during the Easter season, and, as we go to press, plans are rapidly maturing for the organization's annual light opera production, which this year will be the colorful "Robin Hood" by the eminent composer, DeKoven.

Joint
DEDICATION

THIM JOMPSON and W. E. FITWHORD

whose life-long, unwavering, unflagging (or what have you) searches and researches in the realms of Mush and Morality, "Taters" and Turpitude have endowed humanity with two Joints of rival lustre—the Ynnyun and the Key Coop—we herewith serve up this joint dedication.

In solemn conclave assembled, we, the misigned members of the staff of the Sigmarehive, having with proper and improper ceremony flipped a lead Scotch penny borrowed (now you tell one) from Sotis O. Gawyer, did thereby resolve: (1) That, if said counterfeit fell with heads up, we should hereinafter advertise first the glories of Jompson. (2) That, if tails appeared, Fitwhord should inevitably be the first to come. (3) That, if said coin landed on its edge, we should dedicate our magazine to the Improroprietor of the Courtesy Parlor (aforementioned). And, Gawyer having grabbed his penny before it hit the floor, but we being quite confident that heads were topmost in the air when we last saw the Mazumalet (Mazuma—Sanserit diminutive), we do hereby accept the dictates of gravity in deciding between the relative and equal deserts of these two Knights of the Ladle and Flashlight, and, therefore, do resolve to place first in the hereinafter position

THIM JOMPSON

A true yeoman of the "Ole Skule," a scholar whose researches in the underworld of economic gastronomics, misconducted in his Gothic laboratory, have set the world a-gassed. A stuckfast believer in the untouched possibilities of science, a man whose motto, like Columbus's, was "SALE ON!" he has made discoveries which Thomas A. Edison in his meanest moments would never have been guilty of: Namely, that the human stomach, like the appendices, is an excess organ and may be gotten rid of by disuse (or abuse) in the course of four years (maybe sooner). He has proved this by experiment on two thousand college students in his starvatory, thus killing two birds (not students, for once) with one stone; viz., proving his theory and conserving the supply of guinea pigs by finding a worthwhile use for college students. His further researches have uncovered formulie (French form of word) whereby he can transform concrete into rolls, buckshot into beans, mud into coffee, leather into lettuce, Crocodile hide into sirloin, exeelsior into spaghetti, water into ice cream, second hand motor oil into tea, left-over white-wash into milk, spoiled paint into cream, oak bark into chipped beef, flagstones into flapjacks, flies into raisins, and hot air into menus. As an unscientific diversion he has succeeded in transmuting insolence into service, cusswords into kindness, and dirty dishcloths into Madeira linen. For these and other benefactions too spurious to mention, we add our felicitation to those of the students who, out of sheer gratitude, gather under the noble alchemist's window nightly, present him with whole baskets of razzberries, and serenade him with: "Please Give Us Something to Dismember You By."

And, now unto the second joint of this Dedication:

W. E. FITWHORD

The age worn rule that, when two great men stand side by side, one must overshadow the other a bit, was fundamentally reversed when this prodigy came into our family. When he assumed yoke as illustrious running mate with his predecessor, Jompson, they did not, like other minus quantities, cancel each other, but acted as mutual complements. Fitwhord (Fit, as we affectedly call him) came to us only last year, but during his short stay in the Yunyun basement he has taken the keys to our hearts, our rooms, and our possessions. Although burdened with woes and cares of his own, he is never too weary to put a cheery word into someone else's business or to stick his genial face into somebody else's room without knocking on the door. He has an innate gift of camaraderie which inclines him to drop in on you most any time when you aren't receiving company. He brings his friends into your room, unheralded and unannounced, to show them the dormitories, regardless of how en deshabillé you may be. Like Atlas of old, Hercules of older, and Vulcan of oldest, he bears the world on his stooping shoulders, a club in his hands, and forges at his smithy the fetters which bind us all. We are afraid we shall see him at his post long after the capacity to do is gone and only the will to subserve remains. Disciple of Gallyad, Peeper at Morals, Defender of the Faith, Persecutor of the Unfaithful, Stabilizer of the Flashlight Industry, Friend to Mankind, and Patron Saint of the Amalgamated Order of Locksmiths, what more can be said of him than "Like the peace of Heaven, he passeth all understanding." Such a man!

THE RAIDIN'

(With confused apologies to Edgar Allan Poe)

By LARRY TAWLESS

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, drunk and bleary,
Over many a quaint and curious bottle of imported lore—
While I nodded, nearly napping, suddenly there came a tapping,
As of someone gently rapping, rapping at my chamber door.
“ ’Tis some visitor,” I muttered, “tapping at my chamber door—
Wants a drink and nothing more.”

Presently my head grew clearer; so I moved a little nearer,
 "Sir," said I, "or Madam, truly your forgiveness I implore;
 But the fact is I was drinking, and naturally was not thinking,
 And so slyly you came slinking, slinking to my chamber door.
 That I hoped I had not heard you"—here I opened wide the door;—
 Footprints there and nothing more.

Back into my chamber turning, with the liquor in me burning,
 Soon again I heard a tapping, somewhat louder than before.
 "Surely," said I, "surely that is something at my window lattice;
 Let me see, then, where my gat is, and this nuisance now explore—
 Let my head be still a moment, and this nuisance now explore;—
 'Tis just a sot and nothing more."

Open here I flung the shutter, when, with many a spit and sputter,
In there crawled a portly Chieftain with an authoritative roar.
Not the least apology made he; not a minute stopped or stayed he,
And despite the ton that weighed he, sprinted toward my closet door—
Perched upon my broken arm chair, peering at my closet floor—
Sat and sniffed and nothing more.

Then this chiefie chap beguiling my beared senses into smiling,
By the brave and stern decorum of the countenance he wore:
"Though my eyes be red and bleary, and my head for sleep is weary,
Gassly, grim, and ancient Chieftain, wandering from thy nightly tour,
Tell me what the hell thou seekest on this dormitory floor!"

Quoth the Chiefie, "Got one more?"

Much I marveled this ungainly bird to hear discourse so sanely,
Though his answer little meaning, little relevancy bore;
For we cannot help agreeing that no rational human being
Ever yet was cursed with speaking with this bird beside my door—
With this rather portly Chieftain perched beside my eloset door,
Who had asked me, "Got one more?"

To that Chiefie sitting lonely on that arm chair I spoke only,
"Not one drop of this good liquor, not one drop will I outpour."
"Then, by the gods," he quoted, "I will see that you're reported."
Then I said with whiskey bloated: "Other boys have drunk before—
On the morrow this will leave me as my drinks have done before."
Still said Chieftain, "Got one more?"

Then methought the air grew denser, perfumed by this prying censor,
So I opened up the window, and I opened up the door.
"Wretch," I cried, "the devil's lent thee, to this dorm old Whit hath sent thee—
Was it spite or was it thirst that brought you, Chiefie, to my door?
Sit and watch me quaff this liquor and forget it as of yore."
Quoth the Chieftain, "Nevermore."

"Be that word our sign of parting, prowling fiend!" I shrieked upstarting—
"Get thee back into the Union, so that I may snatch a snore!
Leave no charge slip as a token of this word that thou hast spoken!
Leave my lonely spree unbroken!—quit the chair beside my door!
Take thy hands from off my bottle, take thy form from out my door!"
Quoth the Chiefie, "Nevermore."

And that Chieftain, never flitting, still was sitting, still was sitting
On that broken down old arm chair just beside my closet door;
And his eyes had all the seeming of a dumb bell's when he's dreaming
Of the quart that he'd fall heir to when I fell into a snore.
And that quart from off that Chiefie, sitting by my closet door,
Has been rescued—nevermore!

TO OUR DISTRACTOR

(Dedicated to Woodyard Kipling, in the fond hope and belief that in his travels in distant climes he has never experienced such suffering as this.)

By MITTFIELD PUFF HARSHALL

When the last assignment is finished, and the ink in the notebooks has dried,
When the most brilliant man has completed his work, and the dumbest student has tried,

We shall rest, and oh boy, we shall need it—lie down for an hour or two;
Till the damndest of all damned tractors has set us to cussing anew.

And those that don't cuss will be miserable; they shall sit in a back-breaking chair,
And suffer their pain in silence, and grit their teeth in despair.
They will suffer like saints of the olden days—Magdalene, Stephen, and Paul,
And long for the peace of a boiler factory, engines, hammers, and all.

And only a fool would praise it, while the whole student body will blame;
And no one shall cuss it for money and no one cuss it for fame,
But each for the joy of the cussing, and each in his original way,
Shall cuss the Thing as he sees it for the mess it makes of the day.

OWED TO THE CAMPUS BOOTLEGGER

By BARREL MCSQUIRDY

There's something left for me
Of drinks that used to be;
I live in revelry
Among my Bottled Bonds.

If you are feeling blue,
I have a snort for you—
You'll see a snake or two
Among my Bottled Bonds.

A few more cases rest
Down in my cellar chest,
As though they do their best
To bring intoxication.

I drink them one by one,
And when my drinking's done,
I'm mother's drunken son (Mammy!)
Among my Bottled Bonds.

IT TAKES A HEAP O' LIQUOR IN A HOUSE TO MAKE IT HOME

(Dedicated to Jarvis, Aycock, Branson, and other historic sotleries. Without apologies to and with greatest admiration for Cocky Blue, Lester Todd, Rainey Bryant, Paul Robbins, Harold Ellison, Homer Lippard, Ivey Allen, Henry Bost, and others too numerous to mention, yet too famous to omit.)

By RALPH HOWLING

It takes a heap o' liquor in a house to make it home,
A heap o' corn and Bourbon; and sometimes you have to roam
Around the whole durn city before you find a guy
Who knows a guy who knows a guy who knows a place to buy.
It don't make any difference how rich you git to be,
How much your room-mate's neckties cost, how good your credit be;
It just ain't home, though it be the palace of a king,
Until you are too drunk to see and your voice too cracked to sing.

Home ain't a place in Prohibition days that you can find in a minute;
Before it's home there's got to be a heap o' liquor in it.
There's got to be some pints and quarts, and then
You've got to get your friends and bring the last one in.
And, gradually, as the party goes on, you find you wouldn't part
With any jar you've ever used; they've grown into your heart.
The ginger ale bottles, the paper cups, the pass-out clothes you wore
You hoard, and if you could, you'd keep the smells upon the floor.

You've got to drink to make it home; you've got to sit and pout
Beside a precious room-mate's bed and know he's passing out.
And in the stillness of the night, he goes up to the door
And calmly shoots his lunch away and starts to drink once more.
These are the scenes that grip your heart, and when your throat is dried,
You find you're not as sociable as when you're ossified.
And tugging at ye always are pleasant memories
That there's two more gallon jugs at the place where you got these.

You've got to sing and dance and drink, and sit around and play,
And learn to love most anyone in any sort of way.
And the roses on your noses blossom all the year
And grow to be a part of you, suggesting someone dear
Whom you used to love long, long ago,
When you were just a souse.
And your next-door neighbor says, "This drink is on the house."
And I says, "God bless your house from the cellar to the dome.
But it takes a heap o' liquor in a house to make it home."

SOMNOLENCE

By MORBID W. FIERCE

Algernon Periwinkle XVI was the scion of a wealthy and notorious family. His father was the son of three of the passengers who came over on the Mayflower (a boat which is alleged to have run steadily from England to America for twenty years), while his mother's only claim to fame was that one of her ancestors was a pallbearer at the funeral of Judas Iscariot. Great was the rejoicing in the household and the chagrin in the neighborhood when Algernon XVI first saw the light of day, the infamous event happening at 3 p.m. Eastern Standard Daylight Saving Time, so as not to inconvenience his mother, who never arose before 11 a.m.

Through his early days Algernon was the pet (Ed. Note: we substituted "pet" for "pest") of the community. He received the usual liberal education marketed by high schools and made an outstanding record in extra-curricular activities. When it inevitably came time for him to go to college, the father wanted his son to have the best educational advantages the world could offer, but he would not consider any colleges but Podunk Academy, Podunksville, Indiana, and old Dukinlee University. Willing as he was to work his son's way through college, he couldn't politic Algernon into Podunk, even though he offered to endow the school with a concrete bird bath for the campus. Dukinlee accepted the bird bath and Algernon matriculated at the winter resort in 1929 (September).

College brought the youngster face to face with the fraternity problem which makes so many fathers grey. After many rash promises, broken hearts, and aching heads, he decided to pledge his allegiance and his father's bank roll to dear ole I Eta Pie. The next day after initiation he realized that the mistake had been mutual, but, as he was in the bonds, he resolved to make the best of it.

Now, Algernon was a brilliant student and, with the aid of the honor system, piled up grades that merited the attention of both Phi Beta Kappa and its brother lodge, Kappa Beta Phi. He accepted both bids and for a while led the life of a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Finally he was forced to choose between the two ornery bodies (Kappa Beta Phi having learned that he got drunk at the Phi Beta Kappa banquet, a gross breach of loyalty to the former lodge). By secret vote I Eta Pie decided, after both sides had been convincingly presented, that the first allegiance of Algernon Periwinkle XVI was to Kappa Beta Phi; so each night thereafter he would fold up his tent and silently steal away.

Soon this night life began to tell on him. His usually nimble brain became clouded and it was necessary for him to get more sleep. As this was impossible at night, he decided to sleep in the mornings, reserving his afternoons for study and research. The arrangement seemed ideal, and threatened to become permanent. But, alas, there is a destiny that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we may.

The maid came around one morning at 7 a.m. (one hour later than usual) to sweep the trash back under Algernon's bed, and was scandalized when she discovered the Sixteenth Periwinkle still under the sheets, instead of being up watching the sun rise, as all students at Dukinlee are supposed to do. Fired with righteous indignation, she dropped her dustpan and broom, strode to the Yunyun and made loud complaint over this breach of university etiquette. Czar Fitwhord didn't understand at first what she meant by "etiquette," never having heard of the word, but, when she explained the situation, she and he vibrated on the same wave length. He ordered the president to call a joint-faculty-administration meeting to consider nipping this obnoxious practice in the bud, or "in the blankets," as Fitwhord picturesquely mis termed it. Just what to do, was the question.

Finally a rotten cell exploded in the brain of one of the crowned heads therein assembled, and he spawned this suggestion: "Ladies and fruit-jar-inbalers, I am going to suggest something so radical that I fear immediate shipment as a Bolshevik. I suggest that we fine him."

If a freshman had eut chapel or a senior had attended, there would have been no greater consternation in misadministrative eircles. "Impossible!" cried one, "We couldn't do that. We never have fined a student before, and we must stick (or be stuck) by tradition." Another exclaimed: "Being in a state of transition, we cannot afford to make new moves."

The boldness of the idea, however, pleased the majority, and a committee was dispatched to break the news to Algernon, who was anxiously pacing the floor. As the committee disappeared through the Kep Coop door, one of the members was heard to observe: "If you lie down too late, you get up with fees."

While awaiting the committee's return, the assembly fell, as Dukinlee assemblies usually do, into dissension over the possible disposal of the money hijacked from the Sixteenth Periwinkle. "Let's hire a cop," suggested one administrative officer. "Let's install drinking fountains in the dormitories," offered another, but the suggestion created such a storm of laughter that he subsided behind Fitwhord's throne. "Let's build some classroom buildings," chirped another, but the pained expression on the faces of his confederates indicated that he had spoken out of time. "Why not hire football players," spoke up a third. "No use" said the treasurer, "That's taken care of in the university budget." "Let's install dictaphones in all student rooms," recommended Shack Chiefner, infamous sleuth, "so we can keep a close tab on the students and ship any who hold radical opinions or tell smutty stories in their rooms." "No need for them," interrupted Czar Fitword. "I spy on every student in the university enough to deny them any privacy." Finally, one silent member of the gang, who had apparently been immersed in deep stupor, arose and ejected this suggestion: "Gentlemen, I propose that we buy six new tractors so that all our students may enjoy the same enterta' ment simultaneously." The motion was seconded and unanimously carried.

Soon the committee which had been sent to jolt the Periwinkle fortune returned with the news that Algernon refused to pay his fine. "Upon what grounds does he base this act of unprecedented insubordination?" roared the chairman of the conspiracy. "Upon the grounds that it is unconstitutional," replied the hench-committee-man. "What!" re-roared the chairman. "Has he never read Austin's theory of sovereignty; viz., that no act of the sovereign is unconstitutional, or that nothing can be law that is not approved by the sovereign? Does he not know that the sovereign is not bound by any rules save the laws of sovereignty?" "Well, Your Muchness," quoth the hench-committee-man, "he quotes John Marshall, with these words: 'The power to tax is the power to destroy' (McCulloch vs. Maryland,

4 Wheaton 316).” “Who is John Marshall?” queried the conspirators. “We’ve never heard of him.” “I know, Your Upness,” volunteered one. “He’s a senior at Dukinlee.” “Have him shipped immediately,” re-roared the chair-henchman. Finally, the following entry was made on the secret books of the conspiracy: “We hereby highly resolve that, if Algernon Periwinkle XVI does not pay his fines within ten days, he shall be denied the privilege of eating at the University Yunyun.”

In the meantime, the I Eta Pie chapter room was a scene of distraction. Algernon, surrounded by his brethren, was loudly protesting that he would not pay his fines, because the power of the university to tax him meant that he could not sleep; if he couldn’t sleep, he couldn’t drink, and, thus, by the power of taxation, the university could control drinking, which was a flagrant disabuse of the taxing power. It denied a man the right to drink freely, something never contemplated by the staunchest advocate of Prohibition. Thus ran his argument. Algernon was asked to leave the room and the fraternity debated the status quo.

Finally, it was decided, as the chapter treasury was defunct, to solicit contributions from the student body at large to pay the fines of the youngest Periwinkle, in order to save the honor of the fraternity and the health of Algernon, which would be ruined if he couldn’t eat at the Yunyun. So popular was Algernon that enough funds were collected to pay his sleeping fees every morning until eight o’clock for six months. Thus Algernon’s health was saved, the dishonor of the fraternity was maintained, and enough new tractors to make the Battle of the Marne resemble a Quaker revival were bought and put in operation plowing up the Dukinlee campus at five o’clock each morning, excepting Sundays, when they started at four.

BUNK PREVIEWS

THE LIFE HISTORY OF A CHILD PRODIGY

The Master Key—The Autobiography of a Great Detective. By Shack Chiefner. 2 v. 100,000,000,000,000 pp. New York: The Whiz Bang Co. Price: University Bunk Store, $10.00; Anywhere Else, 50c.

At last Benvenuto Cellini has found a fit room-mate in the Chamber of Immortality. For the first time since the Renaissance there has flashed across the literary horizon a personality whose confessions make a worthy companion piece to the narrative of the famous Wop with his Salamanders and chronic braggadocio. There is romance, truth, philosophy, realism about this book that make it one of the most vital and moving human documents the century has produced. It is more than a mere day-by-day account of the growth of a great soul; it is at once a tale of misadventure, a treatise on abnormal psychology, a repository of practical philosophy, and a picaresque novel, all the elements thereof being moulded together by the imprint of the great and obtruding personality whose tale it tells.

The author is well qualified to tell the story of crime from first hand information, having driven patrol wagons and carried spare flashlights for police squads on three continents. He received his early training under Sherlock Holmes. "It was during the first week of my association with Sherly," Mr. Chiefner states, "that he contracted the annoying habit of yelling, 'Quick, Watson, the needle!' He interrupted me thus the first time I tried to explain to him that a good master key and a flashlight could beat all deductive analysis when it came to catching criminals." Mr. Chiefner was present at the Murders in the Rue Morgue and spent eighteen years searching for the Purloined Letter. He proved at last that there was no letter, and that a fellow named Poe wrote it himself to start a front page scandal. "Bragging publicity seeker!" observes the author, "How I hate them!" Among other brilliant passages in the book are those in which the great sleuth establishes that rotten underpinning caused the Fall of the House of Usher, hot air caused the Rise of the House of Rothschild, scarcity of Muscles closed down Muscle Shoals, and that he could have caught the murderer red-handed, had he only been able to snatch off the Mask of the Red Death.

The autobiography begins where all such narratives should commence—with the author's birth. He relates how, on the second day after he came into the world, he asked his father what brought him, and was told the old stork story. "Even at that early age," he admits modestly, "my intelligence compelled me to doubt such an explanation, for two reasons: first, my thick head and abnormally large infantile bay window made me too heavy for any bird to carry on his bill; second, the windows of the house were all closed and there was a fire in the fireplace, cutting off ingress through the chimney. I had not at that time, nor have I to this day, ever heard of storks carrying master keys. The bird just simply could not have got into the house. I am now now nearly forty years old, and still I don't believe what my father told me."

Chiefner says that this piece of parental deception implanted in him the firm resolution never to tell young people lies. "And, if I do say it," he runs on, "to this day I have kept my resolution."

The great defective's education began early. At the age of six months he was reading Hair Breadth Harry in the newspapers and sleeping with The Thin Dime Murder Case under his pillow. The instinct and natural talent which have made him a master figure in the criminal world were manifest before he was two years old. But let him tell it in his own quaint way: "Almost as early as I can remember, I had a mania for stealing other people's keys and unlocking their bedroom doors at unaccountable hours, hoping to catch them doing things. I pried into old trunks, suit cases, wardrobes, etc., and spent whole days at a time rummaging through other people's closets searching for bottles, which somehow signified evil to me. Imagine my rapture when I found an empty milk bottle in my neighbor's closet while he was out at dinner. I turned him up to the police and felt that I had done a good day's work. Another favorite practice of mine was to delay my return from school until nightfall in order to spy on people parked in buggies along the lonely country road between my home and the reform school. My usual procedure was to slip up behind the buggy with my trusty flashlight (inherited from Uncle Ebenezer, who was a boot-legger), flash the beam in the occupants' faces and demand: 'What's yer name and who's that woman you've got there?' You must be rough with 'em like that, or they'll put something over on you. If there's a woman in the case, which there usually is, you'd better insinuate she's a pretty bad article right off, or she'll convince you that she ain't."

One adventure chases another with suffocating swiftness throughout the book. As an example (and a warning), this reviewer takes the account of the famous Fraternity Section Case, which Chiefner solved single handed, empty headed, and alone. "At that time," he says (pp. 986-1015), "I was chief of the police department operating under the Bureau (or maybe it was the Sideboard, I forget) of Keys and Moral Turpitude, headed by that illustrious locksmith and virtue-oso, Fitwhord, who had issued a ukase forbidding skirts being taken into fraternity sections. One afternoon while I was sneaking about the campus, hoping to find somebody who hadn't thrown away his last Listerine bottle, I detected two desperate seniors smuggling—in broad daylight, mind you—a brace of suspicious-looking women into a dormitory. Arming myself to the teeth and securing my master key, I set out after the fleeing criminals. By careful deduction, I figured that, as they were heading toward a fraternity section, they were going there. Not letting them get out of my sight, but keeping behind doors and trees as much as I could, I followed until they entered a chapter room which belched the echoes of unrestrained revelry. A Victrola was playing, and, above the clamor, I heard a menacing voice thunder, 'Three diamonds!' Here, at last, was the lair of the notorious jewel smugglers I had hunted for twenty years! Boldly

I screwed up my courage and blundered into the room. There sat twenty grim-looking college students and a professor, talking amiably to the two dangerous women I had seen only a moment ago! I detected the professor just as I was about to flash my badge. My heart sank. My soul froze. My knees chattered. I was overwhelmed, for I knew that, when the faculty allied itself with crime, neither Fitwhord nor I could save the world. I retired as quietly and modestly as I had come."

Although engaged in a grim trade, this great man has his human streak. (Ed. Note: The office boy put "yellow" in here, but we took it out.) He is a great lover of young people, gathering hundreds of them around him whenever he can and telling them stories by the hour. When he can't find them, he gets so lonesome that he goes hunting them with his trusty flashlight. He knows exactly where to find them, years of experience having taught him that a spring night in a co-ed college will yield him plenty of companions. The greatest testimonial to the good man's gift of camaraderie is the handsome new stadium presented him by his admirers, to be used as a place for entertaining his young friends at flashlight parties. Mr. Chiefner expresses incandescent gratitude therefore, modestly admitting that he thinks he deserves it.

The book is neatly bound in oil cloth and illustrated with half-tone cuts of the defective picking locks. It has been endorsed by the Literary Guilt, the Society for Fallen Fleas, and this previewer is recommending it for underwriting by the Ananias club.

BEYOND WORDS

All Quiet on the Eastern Front. Translated by Nick Laney from the text of Her Remark. 300½ pp. Price: 3 dopes, two packs cigarettes, a ride between campuses, and a corsage. Published anywhere there's an audience.

This is the first attempt which has been made, insofar as we know, to translate the colloquial, provincial, and idiotic co-ed chatter into the King's English. The book, in its original form, is the work of countless millions of co-eds who have been sacrificed upon the davenportes of higher education. The translation is made by one who has heard the non-sensical chatter for twenty years, but is always quiet in their presence, because when he hears nothing he says nothing. We cite a few excerpts:

"O, darling, (giggle, giggle, giggle—untranslatable) I'm so thrilled to see you! Where in the wurruld have you been keeping yourself? What a lovely, darling dress you have on: (under her breath: You look like the very devil, and I know that's last year's dress!) Let's go to the dope shop and see if we can't persuade some of the handsome drug-store cowboys to buy us a drink and a sandwich. I want to tell you about the sweeeeeetist boy I met last nite. Yes, he was an I Tappa Keg (Pair of giggles). I would have swiped his pin, but he had it chained on and I couldn't break the chain! Honey, I think the Rho Dammit Rho's have some perfectly daa-aar-ling boys, but they have such o-old furniture in their chapter room. Are ya going to the dance tonight? I've been bidden to all sixteen, but couldn't go to but fifteen, 'cause that was all the evenin' dresses I have. Was I rebarrassed? Honey, you just don't know!"

Page 256: "Oh, here's Tom. Let's bum a ride to the other campus with him." (Get in car smiling sweetly and giggling coyly) "Hey, Tom, old sport! Met the cutest boy from your home town last night. He said his cousin and your brother were fraternity brothers at the University of Nowhere. He asked me for a date tonight, but I'm filled up for the next three weeks. Now, ain't that jest teeecw bad? O, Tom, are you really going into law school next year? I think that's just geooorgeous! Don't you, Dot? I'm going to study law some time, if I ever finish my major in Ec. One." (Told a friend last night she was going to study medicine) "O, I flunked History One, but that ought not to keep me out of law school. I have the sweetest prof you ever saw in government! He thinks I'm the stuff! I sit right on the front row and ask questions. Yesterday I asked him why George Washington was first in war and first in peace and yet married a widow, and he thought I was the smaa-aartest thiing! O, I flunked it last semester for the fourth time, but, then, I've been sick so much since I've been in school. He asked me what state I was a citizen of, and I told him the State of Starvation." (Couple of giggles. Bored expression on driver's face.) "No, Tom, I'm not hungry. 'So nice of you to ask me to have something, but I dont care for it—well, if you insist, bring me a chocolate shake with ice cream, a toasted sandwich, double deck, a Mity Good, a coupla Chawclate bars, and a packa cigarettes. But, reeeely, I'm not hungry." (Exit Tom on stretcher.)

Page 160: "O, Bill, you played such a sweeee-eet game of football yesterday! But what was everybody chasing you for that time? Then another time, when you were going through the line and dropped the ball, the other girls said you fumbled, but I knew you were so big-hearted that you gave the ball away because you thought someone else wanted it. That's just like you, Bill, always thinking of the other fellow first!" (Couple of giggles. Bored expression on athlete's face. Oath under breath.) "And, Bill, what was that band leader shaking that stick at the cheer leader for? If he wan't shaking it at him, what was the cheer leader hollering for? O, Bill, I got about half tight last night. My date let me smell the stopper and I felt so good I made whoopee. O, Bill, don't hurry. Really, we're just delighted to see you." (Exit Bill, exclaiming under his breath: "Thank God!! Why that woman could talk the horns off a brass monkey!") (Quiet co-ed to second dumbbell): "O, Bill is such a bore I'm glad he's gone. He won't let you get a word in edgeways! Cum on, honey, let's go to the library and strut around. No, darling, you don't have to pay to get in. Let's go look at the society page and the funny papers."

The title of the book is really a misnomer, as there is really no such word in the Co-ed language as "quiet"; the translator, therefore, used the only word which they needed. The book is handsomely bound in Baloney skin and is confusely illustrated with eccentric circles, the Co-ed national emblem. The modernistic illustrations do credit to the dizziness of the authors. The rather pointed preface is written by P. T. Barnum and convincingly illustrates his famous saying. He contends that, since co-education became general, they are being born by the second instead of the minute. The translator expresses, in his apologetic remarks, his appreciation to Charles F. Honeycutt, Jr., for his aid in translation. Mr. Honeycutt, by his long sojourn in Co-edia, has not only learned the language, but has learned to interpret it with dead certainty.

MAJOR GEORGE WHOOPIE.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

A Brief Survey of Universal Knowledge. By Mip Pillar. Three Million Volumes. Pages Uncounted. Publisher Lynched. Price: Free at All Hours.

The purpose of this monumental work, as the author misstates in a brief introduction of 80,000 pages, is to furnish a handy indigest of all that has been thought and said in the world since the Year One, and a lot that never will be said again. He modestly admits that the work is more or less a trifle tossed off for amusement while he was recuperating from the devastating labors of compiling his series of lectures on The Genesis of Checkers, which are now being published serially by The Pennsylvania Grit. "Had I really given my best energies thereto," he says (Preface, p. 8,385), "I am convinced that I could have turned out something that would have surprised everybody."

The author's students who have sat at his feet for long winter evenings while he occupied the stool of dissimulative phychology do not share his opinion that the compendium is so inconsequential, but insist that it is a very serious accomplishment. Every page bears the off-set of the scholar's personality; the instinctive reversion to braggadocio, the humility and open-mindedness which characterize the true man of learning weep at the reader from every line. As an example, take (and keep) this extract from the author's succinct discussion of English literature which he asserts he prepared on the evening following the afternoon in which he mastered the subject: "Ther aint no use for nobody to waist all his time studying inglish. it's so simpel that only such dumbbells as the rest uv the world has to study to git. i mastered it in a evening, after dinnah between terns at checkers my favrit amuzzment. who wants ta waist all his lif lerning old pomes. ya caint git no good out uv em unless ya kin resite em to sumboddy. all lernin must be showed off or it aint no good. science, perlitical or urtherwise, mathmaticks, butterflyes, or checkers is more confuzzing to yer herers. so take one of these here streams of lernin if you wanna make a name fer yourself."

At least one half of the work is devoted to jurisprudence, the author gloating especially over the laws of libel, blackmail, slander, malicious statements, insinuations, and inuendos. He claims these are the greatest boon to mankind since the drowning of Pharoah's cavalry. The section dealing with political economy is characteristically long-winded and touched with the charming vacuity of which the writer alone is culpable. It is unenlightened by a confusing array of charts and graphs showing the disorganization of state governments, the life cycle of the ovis poli, and the sex life of the June bug. The text says these charts were unprepared by the author between visits to a seminar which he occasionally dishonored with his presence while a mere graduate student.

There are several hundred volumes of photographs showing the author's poor choice collection of preserved June bugs, horse flies, mosquitoes, gnats, turtle's eggs, and horse feathers. This last-mentioned curiosity was collected by the author in great quantities in the wilds of Mississippi, which he calls home, (Ed. Note: State authorities deny charge) and is now being distributed by him in the "P" section of the Belchin' Kilgo.

Among other topics to which countless volumes are devoted are: thermio-dynamics, radium, bulliferoosteopathy, prevariochiropractics, bullobiogenesis, hotairocatharsis, philoprogenetiveflinfflam, etc. (or, as Dr. Piller says in German, "und so weit"). These are a few samples from the expensive vocabulary which the author wears with the same grace with which a South American general sports his badges.

The learned man is rhapsodic in his praise of radio, which he deems the greatest invention since wheels. Because, he unreasons, in the old days the audience of a bull artist was, by physical necessity, limited; now he can shoot his line to a hundred million persons simultaneously, provided they don't shut him off, which contingency the doctor claims can be taken care of by the passage of laws forbidding the shutting off of radios while bull artists are on the air. (Ed. Note: Which is always.) He recommends equipping all graduate dormitories with broadcasting stations, saying that this is cheap and practical in the lower regions where there is not so much ozone in the air.

Dr. Piller states in confusion that this will be, probably (Ed. Note: D— that word), his last contribution to ignorance, as he is over—(and under)—occupied with his duties as International President of Inveterated Ananias Clubs and as Holder of the Stool of Dissimulative Psychology located in his new office in the "I" section of the Belchin' Kilgo.

The books are carefully bound in horsehair and abusively illustrated. The frontispiece of the last volume is a reproduction of an inspring cylinder-oil painting of the writer riding another jackass. The magnum opus is dedicated, in the author's own words: "To all the dumb world, consideration of which makes me tragically lonely." We pass this beautiful sentiment on. (Ed. Note: We hope, forever.) It is well worth the price of the books.

HARLIE CHOBAN.

HE GOT HIS DEGREE

My Search for Courtesy. By Sotis O. Gawyer. Published by the Literary Guilt. 1916. (Ed. Note: Excuse late review, but we just got book yesterday) 16,934,725½ pp. Price same as Any Other Book Sold at University Bunk Store.

This book is the result of several years spent in research for the H.A. degree. The author traces the years of diligent effort which he spent in trying to find courtesy. He reports that this is a lost art in monopolistic industries, having been banished by royal decree of Julius Caesar I (54 B.C.) and rebanished successively by Julius Caesar, II (Justinian, 500 A.D.), Julius Caesar, III (Napoleon Bonaparte, 1803), and Julius Caesar, IV (L. A. Cee, 1929). The author reports that once he found a manuscript stating that in one small school (name withheld by request) the proprietor of the campus store treated his school clientele with something approximating consideration. The Powers That Were became so enraged that they indicted said proprietor for making money under false pretenses and the state denied the school the privilege of charging fees for a period of ten days. "It is my intention," says the author (p. 728), "to see that no such tragedy ever hits our fair campus. During this period of transition we can afford to do nothing that would bring criticism upon our heads. Traditions must be preserved."

It is a splendid piece of research, ignobly done for the advancement of humanity (Ed. Note: We took "prices" out of manuscript and substituted "humanity.") and dedicated to the proposition that courtesy is dead. It is the belief of the writer that it will never be resurrected. In fact, it is no more necessary around a college community than a class room building to a twenty million dollar university.

The book is suffusely illustrated with actual photographs of students whose fathers have an A-1 rating in Dun & Bradstreet, vainly waiting in line to get a $1 check cashed. There are also included several snapshots of medical students with microbe-scopes, attempting to find milk in milkshakes, photos of several law students trying to find law in the law books, and the student body at large trying to find education in the co-eds.

The volume is handsomely bound in Scotch grain leather. It is a real contribution to the total sum of human ignorance. Truly we can say: Wade on football, Hannibal on military tactics, Jompson on diabetes. Fitwhord on keys and morality, Sterling on silver, Hoopy on girls, Archimedes on principles, Dorothy Dix on love, and last, but not least, Gawyer on courtesy.

WE EAT HIS WORDS

The Yunyun Ticket Book. By Thim Jompson. Published by the Bunk-of-the-Month Club. Advertised Price (University Catalogue 1930 Edition, p. 293): Not Over $25.00; Actual Price: $30.00 Plus.

The Bunk-of-the-Month Club has already achieved fame at $10.00 an inch for its novel scheme of peddling canned Kultur from Sing Sing to the Rio Grande, but its most abortive triumph came this month when it secured publishing rights to the latest discharge of Mr. Jompson, literary high light (Ed. Note: We revised Copy to read "high light" instead of "tail light") of Sigma Pupsilon, local illiterary soternity. (Ed. Note: We resent this, as dear old Sigma Pup belongs to us and our brethren.) This novelette, as its name denies, is desecrated to the current unpopular fallacy: "In Yunyun There is Strength." It is a true work of the morbid imagination, so fantastic that it taxes the credulity of any reader less naive than Bill Joyner. (Ed. Note: That means everybody else.) Although parts of it indicate the author's indebtedness to Baron Munchausen, Horatio Alger, Jr., the Listreen Ads, and P. T. Barnum, the treatment of theme is sufficiently unoriginal to identify the work as Mr. Jompson's own. The book opens with a fairy tale that suggests the Grimm Brothers and the Gothic novel. To quote the author's introductory (and repeated) chapter: "The management welcomes any suggestion that may be made as to the improvement of service." (Reviewer's Note: This may not be exactly correct, as we haven't a copy beside us. We don't own one, Thank God.) (Ed. Note: Neither do we.) That seems to us about the limit to which fiction, imagination, phantasy, or advertising can attain and steer clear of the federal authorities. One defect of the book (Ed. Note: Only one?) is that of monotony. From cover to cover, the author plays tiresome invariations on the same theme. This effect is, however, a bit relieved by the multicolored pages, a unique feature adopted by the publishers to make sure that no purchaser ever re-eats the same page twice. The biggest objects on the pages are the numbers. The whole plot is a cheap (Ed. Note: Liar! there's nothing cheap about these books.) imitation of O. Henry in that it reserves the surprise climax to the very last page. Read for yourself the author's breath-taking description of how Little Oswald was taught to believe in Santa Claus: "The man who comes to meals with clean hands and face, clean clothes, shows respect for himself and for the opinions and rights of others." The innuendo of that would do discredit to Edward Gibbon or Heinrich Heine. The author says something (for a change), but he suggests a lot more, the true interpretation of this symbolism being: Let us come to the table with clean shirts and faces, so there will be something to contrast with the nasty dishes, the filthy silver, the greasy floor, the spotted table linen (Ed. Note: Cotton), the foul service, and the dirty deal we get for eating here. The author's rather clumsy use of Victor Hugo's theory of artistic contrast, or "Grotesque," is deplorable, just like the whole book. Since the work has been missshaped by so many influences (local, grafting, financial and otherwise), there is little original in it, save the end for which it was written, which is too well known to unfortunately experienced readers to warrant remisstatement here. The book is marketed on an unusual plan, copied (Ed. Note: Stolen) from Jessie James. The reader pays the full price which the publishers extort from him for the book, but he is not allowed to lend his copy to anyone else. The book is his and it isn't his. Another demonstration of the Dukinlee paradox. The book is sadly printed on tissue paper and bound in Scotch cardboard. It was illustrated with the author's picture, but this feature killed the sale; so the publishers took it out.

By tearful and unanimous request of TAP, Messed-in Poses will be prevented from personally mishandling the finances of this production by the unified efforts of the U. S. Marines, the National Guard, the State Militia, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Campus Police Force, and the Boy Scouts of America under the supreme command of Dr. Mip Piller, also absolute dictator of the Sons and Daughters of I Will Arise.

IF

(As Woodyard might have written it had he been advising an aspiring college professor)

By KRED FREPP

If you can cut your class when all about you
Are holding theirs and marking rolls;
If you can trust your students though they doubt you,
And to exams bring notes and scrolls;
If you can wait on term papers and not be tired of waiting,
And in your lectures not deal in bull and lies;
If you can give your quizzes without hating
Not to flunk all but the most wise;

If you can bull and not make bull your master;
If you can think and not make quiz your aim;
If you can pass athletes a little faster,
And keep in with the administration just the same;
If you can bear to hear the stuff you've spoken
Quoted on the campus without turning red;
Or stand and watch the honor system broken,
And sympathize and merely nod your head;

If you can start your class ten minutes after
The hour without regaining it at the end,
If you can bear to hear the student laughter
Ring through the room when you walk in;
If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew
To turn out your class promptly on the dot,
And not keep bulling when there's nothing in you,
And sympathize alike with grind and sot;

If you can teach without telling stale jokes,
Or drink with the boys without bumming their booze;
If you can treat your students as if they were folks,
And chaperone their dances without spreading news;
If you can let your class out right on the minute,
After filling your lectures with knowledge and fun;—
Yours is the campus, and everything that's in it,
And what is more, you'll be a Prof, my son!

"IF" FOR FLAPPERS*

(Dedicated to the outposts on the Eastern Front)

By CROANNA JIM

If you can play a tune on Wrigley's Spearmint,
And not drown out the talking of your eyes;
If you can rattle on with something silly
When in a crowd of elders, still and wise,
If you can make believe you're Cleopatra,
Or Clara Bow, whichever one would fit;
If you can drink a pint without a struggle,
Then on the Flapper's Throne we'll let you sit.

If you can vamp the sermon from the preacher,
Or giggle right out loud while you're at church;
If you can win a dozen men to chase you
After you've given their roommates all the hunch;
If you can paint, and not get painter's colic,
Or roll your hose before the chaperone;
If you can talk a gold tooth from a Hebrew,
Then Flapper's Paradise will be your home.

If you can call out the entire militia
 On seeing a wee mouse in your boudoir;
 If you can break up any well planned party
 Without the hostess even getting sore;
 If you can stay engaged through one whole season,
 And never dream of some new Galahad;
 If you can bluff your way into society,
 You are the Queen of Flapperdom, Egad!

If you can kiss and not let kissing matter,
 Or fall in love, yet never fall too far;
 If you could choose between a host of lovers,
 And pick a handsome one with dough and car;
 If you can dance and then skate home from driving,
 And take another chance with that same churl,—
 Yours are the men, and all of their possessions,
 You've learned to be a flapper then, my girl!

* Editor's Note: This abortion was sent in December 30, 1926, when we were planning this issue. Due to a slight delay in getting the magazine out, the word, "Flapper," has become a bit passé, but we trust our readers will overlook the slight anacronism as they've patiently borne everything else in the magazine for so many years. We thank you.

SONG WITHOUT MUSIC

(With no apologies to Shortfellow's Hiawatha)

By MANK FRENAKER

In a city dark and gloomy,
 Lived a maiden, Lotta Nonsense,
 Lived she there 'mid smoke and traffic,
 Lived she in a tenement lonely.
 In the autumn cool and sparkling
 Tripped she gaily in the morning,
 Tripped she to the street car stopping
 That would take her to her work.
 Stood she on the corner waiting,
 Stood she with the other Shebas,
 When down with a snort and bellow
 Plunged a limousine, and stopped;
 Stopped and asked the timid Lotta
 If she'd ride down in his auto
 To the place where she was going,
 To her work that early morning.
 "Sure," she cooed, and soon was settled
 In the comfort of the Limo,
 With the handsome Butter-and Egg-Man,
 With the hefty millionaire.
 But there came no heated romance
 As the usual fiction ends,
 For she was just his secretary,
 For she and his wife were friends.

CONFESSIONS

Thim Jompson, in an interview with the propaganda agent of the Dukinlee Graft Commission last week, stated that he had secured the service of Baron Munchausen, XIV, C. P. A., in compiling the following distributive analysis to show where the 35c spent for a Yunyun meal goes. This, says Herr Jompson, ought to stop all this adverse criticism of the Yunyun:

Propaganda and Hush (Shhh) Money to the Board of Health.....	15c
Inefficiency and Graft Mismanagement	19c
Overhead	½c
Sinking Fund to Pay Orchestra.....	1/32c

FOOD (as per Propaganda), $1.00; Actual Value.....	1/256c
Total	35c

(SQUEAL)

Tearfully submitted at the point of violence,

This is to certify that I have examined the above statement and find it, like all other Yunyun statements, incorrect.

I MA LIAR,
Notoriously Public.

WHO'S WHO IN MORONIA

Messed-on Poses, a repeater at Dukinlee, again tries to draw the Affrontispiece for The Sigmarchive. He is a depressionistic artist who draws what he sees in the way it doesn't look. Lanky Tawless is a sixth-year sophomore who has studied convivial poetry at the Anheiser-Busch school of expressionism. His wealth of experience has deepened and dampened his personality. He draws his compositions from his inner life. His finest work is the one we re-print here. Ralph Howling is majoring in Ec. One. He is a poet of the new night school whose works are too well known to the police department. Mitfield Puff Harshall is a member of the staff. Why say more? Barrel McSquirdy is an echo from a deserted cloister. Besides not being a poet, he is a vegetarian, living exclusively on Greek roots. Kred Frupp is an Air of the famous Frupp tribe which migrated to this country during plagues in Egypt, bringing some of the plague with them, according to Mr. Frupp. We hate to criticise his work adversely, but we detect a touch of artificiality in his telling anybody how to be anything. Mank Frenaker is a descent of David Garrick who carries his histrionic tendencies into his daily life. His work has already been praised in his reviews in The Chronic-Ill. Croanna Jim introduces herself as usual. Louise Redward Mygod is adviser to Dean Herring. Morbid W. Fierce (what a contrast) really writes good and readable stuff. Thim Jompson is a well-known writer and publisher of fiction. Arles E. Chemerson is an unmistakable offshoot of the famous Bean family of Boston. He is one of the most outstanding contemptibleary figures. Dr. Mip Piller, a review of whose masterwork appears in this tissue, is too well known to everyone who knows him. Major George Whoopee is studying anatomy at Dukiulee. Harlie Choban is a student of the author whose book he reviews. Piston Lope is a passed-out editor of the Chantiqueer. J. S. Thaw, Jr. has already been introduced.

ED. Note: According to our usual custom, we have put some names in the Table of Malcontents whose work does not appear in this tissue. The printers collapsed when they read some of the stuff and it was left out accordingly. FAREWELL.

PATRONIZE OUR ADVERTISERS. They have well nigh made this publication impossible due to the unfortunate fact that their entire funds were inadvertently dropped in the bull rushes under the personal responsibility of Messed-On Poses.

BUILDERS DREAMS

VISIONS created by the imagination precede the achievement of any really great accomplishment. The ability to weave the threads of imagination into the finished fabric is equally important.

It has been the privilege of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY to co-operate with the Chanticleer staff in creating their vision into material form.

Such coöperation is one of the "visions" which precede the building of a successful business, and is a part of the working policy of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY.

To those Staffs desiring complete co-operation, we offer unexcelled service.

You, too, may be proud of your annual.

The staff of the 1931 "Chanticleer" expresses appreciation to the members of the staff of the Alumni Office of Duke University, without whose interest and assistance a modern edition of the "Chanticleer" would have been impossible

To Mr. Henry R. Dwire, director of Public Relations and Alumni Affairs, and his assistants, Miss Elizabeth Aldridge, Miss Laura Deaton, Mr. A. A. Wilkinson, Mr. G. E. Mann, and Mr. Charles A. Dukes, we are especially indebted.

A note of gratitude is also due the Tilley Stores, Inc., and Mrs. Clarence Pember-ton, whose cooperation and advice aided immeasurably in the preparation of the section entitled "Vanity Fair."
